April 2022

To all Kennington Memory Club members and carers.

As Kennington Memory Club trustees and staff we are delighted to be able to welcome you to the Club now it has reopened after the worst of the COVID 19 pandemic. But the world is a different place from before March 2020, so the Club will be running with somewhat more stringent conditions than before. Because of this the Terms and Conditions, which we ask to be signed for every member, have been updated to reflect current practice.

If you would like to know more about how the Club will operate in COVID times, please look at the revised Risk Assessment which can be found in the About Us section of this website.

One of the new procedures that has been put into place is that a check on the temperature of a member may be taken, using an infrared thermometer pointed at the forehead if it is suspected that any member is running a temperature. If there is any doubt about the health of a member, they would have to return home in order to safeguard the well-being of all other members and staff.

During their time at the day centre members will be socially distanced from each other and they will all have their own armchair and table space. They will not have to wear masks or visors, but all staff and volunteers may do so.

We are excited that the Club can offer day care sessions once more. We do hope that members enjoy their day with us and that carers appreciate their time off-duty.
